

PORCH CAMPAIGN

May be Inaugurated by the Republicans of West Virginia.

FAVOR HALL FOR CHAIRMAN.

Parkersburg Expects to Capture the Headquarters of the State Executive Committee—Rough Rider Club to be Organized.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., July 15.—Leading Republicans seem confident that the headquarters of the state executive committee will be located in this city and rumors that the matter was settled several days ago, are in circulation. In connection with this statement it has been suggested that with the headquarters here it would be good politics for the managers to initiate a "porch campaign," on a small scale, by which Mr. White could at all times be in touch with the committee and aid them with his ability and experience as a campaign manager and, at the same time, the voters enjoy the novelty of a trip from their mountain homes to the second city. It is claimed by those favoring the plan, that it would make excursions to Canton popular if it became known that those making the trip would have the privilege of hearing the state as well as the national leaders speak during the same excursion. The suggestion carries with it the sending of agents throughout the interior whose business it will be to get up excursion parties to Parkersburg and Canton, with the privilege of stopping off here for a few days, or making the round trip.

Favors Hall for State Chairman.

Rumors regarding the organization of the state executive committee favor the selection of James K. Hall as chairman and ex-Senator Woodard as secretary, though Dawson's friends seem to believe that he will be re-elected, because of past services. Mr. White has expressed no preference and seems willing to allow the matter to take its course without interference upon his part.

Should the headquarters be located here and the excursion plan carry out, this will be the centre of Republican politics during the campaign.

A Troop of Rough Riders.

When Captain W. W. Monroe went with the committee to Canton to notify Mr. McKinley of his nomination for a second term, he was accompanied by Colonel Ern Hupp, the originator of the plan for the Rough Riders Campaign Club. Hupp had already been to Washington and obtained the endorsement of his scheme from leaders there and through the influence of Monroe, he placed the matter before Chairman Hanna. Mr. Hanna seemed very favorably impressed with the idea and told Hupp that when Rough Rider clubs visited Canton to see the President, he would see that they were furnished horses to be at their disposal as long as they remained in the city. Hupp will begin organizing the first troop during this week and expects to secure a very large body of men from this state. It is proposed to make their Canton trip one of the great features of the campaign.

BITTER FIGHT

Between Collins and Wilson for the Congressional Nomination in the Fourth District—Convention Opens Wednesday.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer.

PARKERSBURG, July 15.—The eyes of Democracy are now turned toward Huntington, where, on Wednesday next, Hon. Henry S. Wilson and Creed Collins will begin their fight for the nomination for Congress from the Fourth district. Mr. Collins, who passed through here Friday evening en route to his home at Pennsboro, seemed confident that he would secure the nomination and Mr. Wilson, who arrived from the interior of the district last night claimed that he "couldn't be beat."

The fight has become so bitter that all chance of a compromise is a thing of the past and the opinion that an outsider would secure the plum is gaining ground daily. Wilson is experienced as a fighter, having pulled off nearly a hundred rounds with George I. Neal during a fifteen hour scrap for the same honor he is after now, at Point Pleasant two years ago. Both men are wealthy and money is being freely spent in the contest. Mr. Wilson will leave for Huntington on Monday night and will open headquarters on Tuesday morning. Collins will probably go down to-morrow noon.

ITALIAN HAND

Of the Democratic Boss of the State Seen in Tenth Senatorial District.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

SRI.—A handful of Democrats of the Tenth Senatorial district, met here Thursday to nominate William Post, of Buckhannon, as their candidate for the coming campaign in this district. Several delegations were under instructions to vote for Mr. Post, but his father-in-law, Major Hurst, would like the nomination on the Republican ticket for the same position.

The relationship of the two men would make it impossible for them both to accept the nomination with any degree of consistency. The situation being well understood by some of the followers of the "Knight of the Purple Pencil," knowing Major Hurst's actions as a member of the board of directors of the hospital at this place, would make him a weak candidate in Lewis county, and finding Mr. Post somewhat "indisposed," succeeded in landing him out of the field in order that Hurst might be nominated and thereby lose the Republican party from three to five hundred votes in this county alone.

The boss worked it nicely on the "unsuspecting" element of the convention, and adjourned it or had it done, and postponed the nomination for thirty days.

Some one of them remarked that it was the proper thing to do, as a great many things would develop in thirty days that if in that time Hurst was not nominated, would insure Republican defeat by thus weakening that ticket, they (the Democrats) could still nominate Post and try to win by making the Democratic ticket strong instead of the surer first plan. Considerable disappointment exists, but all will be made satisfactory if the Republicans walk into the trap. SPECTATOR.

LOVE LETTERS IN HIS COAT.

His Wife's Discovery Lands a Brooklyn Man in Court.

NE WYOMING, July 15.—The mistake of leaving love letters in coat pockets where his wife could get at them was the indirect cause of the appearance in the Lee Avenue police court, Brooklyn, yesterday, of John Gunn, a book-keeper, of 298 North Second street, Brooklyn, charged by his wife with abandonment.

The couple were married five years ago, and lived happily until a month ago, when Mrs. Gunn, who is a brunette, noticed a long, glistening blond hair floating gracefully from the lapel of her husband's coat. He explained the matter away, and a week later his wife found the same old coat similarly decorated. By exercising presence of mind and eloquence Gunn got out of this scrape.

A short time later Mrs. Gunn, while brushing her husband's coat, found several letters in a woman's handwriting, from Miss Madge Wright Emery, of 175 Gates avenue, Brooklyn, and Miss Annie Wickert, of East One Hundred and Forty-seventh street, Manhattan. The letters were full of tender expressions, to say nothing of poetry. The greeting, "Oceans of love to you, Jack," introduced this:

Many a ship has been wrecked at sea For the want of a far and a rudder, And many a fellow lost his life For talking to another.

There was a letter written by Gunn to Miss Emery which he had not mailed. In it he gently reproved Miss Emery for asking him to wait until Sunday before calling again, when his whole soul cried out for her society.

Mrs. Gunn investigated, and learned from each of the two young women that her husband had represented himself as unmarried, and had been permitted to visit them.

When Gunn learned of his wife's discovery he left her. She then had him arrested for abandonment. He was held in $500 bail pending a further hearing.

FATAL FIGHT

With a Bull—Wealthy Farmer Attacked by the Vicious Animal.

Sons Found Him Dying.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., July 15.—

Patrick Walsh, a wealthy farmer whose property was partly in this city and partly in North Pelham, was killed by a bull on his farm yesterday. He put up a long and hard fight for his life, but there was no aid at hand, and the superior lasting powers of the bull gave him the final victory. Mr. Walsh's head was crushed, and the bull stamped upon him, crushing him so that he died within a short time after he was found.

Mr. Walsh was sixty-eight years old, but strong and vigorous. He made a fortune years ago on his farm and retired and lived quietly for some years; but his sons, enlarging the farm, caused their father to again resume work and aid them. He owned the farm. He conducted with his sons an extensive dairy business, and, besides supplying many families in this city with milk and dairy products, had the greater portion of the fine Pelham Manor trade.

The bull belonged to the herd of cattle on the farm. It was usually docile. Occasionally in displayed signs of being vicious, but never to such an extent as to be considered dangerous. Yesterday the bull had one of his bad days. In the morning Mr. Walsh had occasion to cross the field where the herd was grazing, and the bull rushed at him. Mr. Walsh invariably carried a heavy stick when about the farm, and a couple of blows from this caused the bull to retreat for the time. At dinner in the middle of the day Mr. Walsh told his family of the attack.

Went to Drive the Cattle Home.

Mr. Walsh, later in the afternoon, as usual, went out to the pasture to drive the cows home for the evening milking. He is supposed to have been following the herd down the lane leading to the barnyard. He was part way home from the pasture when the bull attacked him. Mr. Walsh defended himself with the stick, and the battle must have been a long and fierce one, as the ground was trampled and torn for a long distance in every direction from the spot where Mr. Walsh was found. The bull had torn the turf out with his horns and hoofs during the battle.

When the bull was found later, he bore evidence of the defense Mr. Walsh made. His nose and head, neck and flanks showed great welts where the heavy stick had been brought down upon him.

The cows did not stop when the fight between the man and beast began, but continued on to the barn, where the sons of Mr. Walsh were awaiting them. It was not until after the milking was done and they went to the house and learned that their father had not returned, that they became alarmed. It was not an infrequent thing for Mr. Walsh to start the cows homeward and then go on to other parts of the farm to look after other things. Neither was it unusual that the bull should not come in.

When Mr. Walsh did not come after almost two hours had elapsed, the sons went out to look for him. They found him lying on the ground with the bull, still frantic and wild, standing bellowing above him. The bull would circle about the body on the ground and below and stamp, but did not touch it.

When Mr. Walsh's sons approached, the bull charged them. They reached a fence and climbed it. They then set about getting to their father. This was no easy task. The bull would not let them approach, and charged upon them at every effort they made. Finally one of them tantalized the bull and caused him to follow him down the lane to a gate. Then he decoyed the bull into a field and at the same time climbed out into the lane, and before the bull could return to the gate he closed it.

Mr. Walsh was carried to his house. A physician was called from this city. When he reached the house Mr. Walsh was dead. He lived about an hour after his sons found him, but a doctor on the spot could not have been able to save him. His head was badly crushed and the skull fractured. The fatal injury is thought to have been caused by the bull stamping upon his body. The clothing and body bore the marks of the hoofs, and the bull must have stamped upon him again and again.

SCHERR WELCOMED

By His Fellow Townsmen When He Returned From His Victory at Charleston—Keyser Ablaze With Red Fire and Enthusiasm.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer. KEYSER, W. Va., July 15.—Keyser was ablaze with enthusiasm and red fire last night, the occasion being the spontaneous outpouring of all the citizens of the town to welcome home the Republican candidate for auditor, Hon. Arnold C. Scherr.

Yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock the fact was made known that Mr. Scherr would arrive home on the 9 o'clock train that evening, and the news spreading throughout the town, a movement in which, judging from the immense throng assembled, it seemed that every citizen of the town took part, was inaugurated to give him a royal reception.

Upon the arrival of the train the Keyser band, together with almost the entire population of the town, was assembled at the station to receive Mr. Scherr. The streets were illuminated brilliantly with torches and red fire and an escort of several hundred men formed in the streets, and cheering and shouting, marched to Mr. Scherr's home, with a reception committee leading the way, while the sidewalks were jammed with ladies and children.

His Throat Temporarily Effected.

Arriving at his home, at Mr. Scherr's request, Frank C. Reynolds remarked that Mr. Scherr's throat was temporarily affected and that it would be impossible for him to make himself heard, but that he wished to extend his heartfelt thanks for this manifestation of the kindly feeling of the people of his own town, which he deeply appreciated and would take the opportunity to personally tell them so.

Mr. Scherr, standing on the steps of his residence, by the side of his delighted daughters, grasped the hand of all who crowded around to congratulate him, and then retired to rest and to read the congratulatory telegrams and letters, which were piled upon his desk. The people here, regardless of political affiliations, are proud to honor Mr. Scherr, as evidenced by this demonstration.

Vice Presidential Average.

New York World: Seven times in 110 years a Vice President of the United States has succeeded to the presidency—three times by election after serving in the second office, and four times to fill vacancies caused by the deaths of the Presidents with whom they were elected. On an average, therefore, calculated upon past history, once in every sixteen years the man chosen as Vice President will later become President. To put it in another way, one Vice President out of every four will eventually come to the higher office.

It is now nearly twenty years since the Republican party nominated a Vice President who later became President. If the average of the last 110 years is to be held good, another Vice President is the before four years overdue for promotion to the higher office.

The Chicago convention of 1890 went through no end of labor, turmoil and excitement, prolonged through thirty-six ballots, to nominate James A. Garfield for President. Then, I began the last day's proceedings, with no excitement or contention, and with no thought about it except that it was a good thing to throw the second place as a crumb of comfort to one of the defeated Grant planks, Chester Alan Arthur was named for Vice President. Garfield actually served four months in office, and then, after four months more during which he lay dying, Chester Alan Arthur became President for more than three-fourths of the entire presidential term.

Famous Incident Recalled.

New York World: The taking of the Taku forts recalls a famous bit of history. It was under the guns of those same forts that Commander Taitall, of our navy, went to the rescue of the British vessels, which were in shallow water and at their mercy, justifying his breach of international law by saying: "Blood is thicker than water."

A Life and Death Fight.

Mr. W. A. Hines, of Manchester, Ia., writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble, which ended in Consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must soon die. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and cured myself, which completely cured me. I would not be without it even if it cost $5.00 a bottle. Hundreds have used it on my recommendation and all say it never fails to cure Throat, Chest and Lung troubles." Regular size 50c and $1.00.
